Reported for August 2007

FINRA® has taken disciplinary actions against the following firms and individuals for violations of NASD rules; federal securities laws, rules and regulations; and the rules of the Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board (MSRB).

Without admitting or denying the findings, the firm, Brooks and McPherson consented to the described sanctions and to the entry of findings that the firm failed to file, in a timely manner, Form U4/U5 amendments and initial Form U5 termination filings as NASD By-Laws require. The findings stated that the firm did not have adequate policies or procedures designed to ensure reportable items were forwarded to the firm's registration department and filed in a timely manner with NASD. The findings also stated that the firm's policies and procedures failed to enumerate which types of events are reportable, had no system to monitor timely filing of Forms U4/U5 and to provide for supervisory reviews for compliance. The findings also included that Brooks and McPherson assigned responsibility for filing amendments to a non-registered clerical employee, and the firm did not have adequate policies or procedures with respect to the individual's duties. NASD found that the firm submitted Form U4/U5 amendments with electronic signatures before a registered principal of the firm received, reviewed and approved the amendments. NASD also found that Brooks signed U4/U5 amendments although he did not supervise registration functions related to filing of Forms U4/U5 or amendments, and approved of the firm's registration department submitting Form U4/U5 filings with his electronic signature before he received, reviewed or signed these filings.

Complaint Filed

FINRA issued the following complaint. Issuance of a disciplinary complaint represents FINRA's initiation of a formal proceeding in which findings as to the allegations in the complaint have not been made and does not represent a decision as to any of the allegations contained in the complaint. Because this complaint is unadjudicated, you may wish to contact the respondent before drawing any conclusions regarding these allegations in the complaint.

North American Clearing, Inc. (CRD #39118, Longwood, Florida) was named as a respondent in a FINRA (fka NASD) complaint alleging that from about October 29, 2004, through about March 11, 2005, the firm prepared and maintained inaccurate customer reserve formula computations, failed to make required deposits to its Special Reserve Account and failed to notify NASD of its failures to make the required deposits. The complaint alleges that from about March 31, 2005, until about July 22, 2005, the firm prepared and maintained inaccurate customer reserve formula computations, failed to promptly make required deposits to its Special Reserve Account and failed to notify NASD of its failure to make the required customer reserve deposits. The complaint also alleges that the firm prepared and maintained an inaccurate net capital computation, trial balance and general ledger as of January 31, 2005, and filed a materially inaccurate FOCUS report for January 2005. The complaint further alleges that the firm conducted an inaccurate box count as of February 28, 2005, in that certificates in the box for positions that were not on the firm's stock record and the amount of shares in the box did not match the firm's stock record.

In addition, the complaint alleges that the firm prepared and maintained inaccurate position records as of March 4 and 9, 2005, and from about January 2005 through about March 2005, it failed to take steps to obtain physical possession or control of securities failed-to-receive by initiating buy-in procedures or otherwise involving ACATs failures and customer-related fails. Moreover, the complaint alleges that from about January 1, 2004, through about February 28, 2005, the firm failed to liquidate, or failed to timely liquidate, unpaid-for customer securities positions in cash accounts; permitted public customers to purchase securities in accounts that were frozen pursuant to Section 220.8(c) of Regulation T without having cash on deposit to pay for the purchases; and from about late October 2004 until about early January 2005, failed to liquidate customer positions in a timely manner in customer margin accounts that fell below the maintenance margin requirements prescribed by NASD Rule 2520(c)(1). Furthermore, the complaint alleges that from about April 2003 through about February 2005, the firm permitted an individual to act as its Operations Manager and to perform functions requiring registration as a Financial and Operations Principal, when she was not so registered. The complaint alleges that as of March 7, 2005, the firm had not conducted independent testing of its AML compliance program, failed to provide prompt notification to NASD of the change of its AML compliance officer until on or about July 25, 2005, failed to update the NASD Contact System to designate a new AML compliance officer, and during 2003 and 2004, failed to conduct ongoing AML training for appropriate personnel. The complaint also alleges that the firm's compliance program was inadequate, in that it failed to establish policies and procedures reasonably designed to detect and cause the reporting of suspicious transactions required under 31 U.S.C. 5318(g) and the implementing regulations thereunder.

The complaint further alleges that from October 1, 2003, through at least April 1, 2005, the firm failed to maintain all internal electronic correspondence on non-erasable, non-rewriteable media and its supervisory system and written procedures regarding internal electronic communications were deficient in that registered persons could delete emails at will, and its written procedures merely stated that the firm retains electronic communications in accordance with regulatory requirements with no further details or explanation. In addition, the complaint alleges that during 2003 and 2004, the firm failed to maintain a continuing and current firm element continuing education program. The complaint also alleges that from about April 2003 through about February 2005, the firm failed to establish and maintain a reasonable supervisory system to monitor its financial and credit risk management relating to its correspondent business. The complaint also alleges that from about April 2003 through about February 2005, the firm, acting through an individual, failed to reasonably supervise the firm's operations system conversion and its operations activities to detect and/or prevent violations, including, but not limited to, inaccurate box counts, position records, buy-in procedures, Regulation T and NASD Rule 2520, maintenance of electronic correspondence and customer account transfers.

The complaint further alleges that from about March 2004 through about March 2005, the firm engaged in the practices of improperly liquidating public customer money market fund positions, and failing to sweep customer free credit balances into customer-designated money market funds or a bank deposit account, in order to create cash flow to meet the firm's daily settlement obligations and, at the time, did not have a bank line of credit to provide cash for its daily settlement obligations. In addition, the complaint alleges that on numerous occasions, the firm failed to sweep customers' free credit balances to a money market fund or a bank deposit account and/or liquidated shares in the designated money market fund without the customer's permission, thereby using the free credit balances to meet its daily settlement obligations and improperly using customer funds and securities. Moreover, the complaint alleges that the firm failed to respond fully to NASD requests to provide account documentation because it failed to maintain the customer new account documentation for some accounts. Furthermore, the complaint alleges that from November 2004 through January 2005, the firm failed to comply with the account validation and transfer requirements of NASD UPC Rule 11870 and validated some transactions late; and from about February 12, 2004, through about May 13, 2004, failed to report to NASD, for itself or for any of its correspondent firms, INSITE information required by NASD Rule 3150(a). In addition, the complaint alleges that from about July 8, 2004, until about February 20, 2005, the firm, acting through an individual, employed and designated on Schedule A of its Form BD a chief compliance officer who was not registered with the firm as a general securities principal or registered in any capacity. (NASD Case #E072005017201)

Citigroup Global Markets to Pay Over $15 Million to Settle Charges Relating to Misleading Documents and Inadequate Disclosure in Retirement Seminars, Meetings for BellSouth Employees

NASD Fines Citigroup $3 Million, Orders $12.2 Million in Restitution to Over 200 Customers, to Be Paid Through Related Class Action Settlement

Three Brokers, Two Managers Receive Suspensions and Fines Totaling $295,000

NASD fined Citigroup Global Markets, Inc., $3 million to settle charges relating to the use of misleading materials in retirement seminars and meetings for BellSouth employees in North Carolina and South Carolina. NASD also ordered Citigroup to pay approximately $12.2 million in restitution to more than 200 former BellSouth employees.

Specifically, NASD found that Citigroup failed to adequately supervise a team of brokers based in Charlotte, NC, who used misleading sales materials during dozens of seminars and meetings for hundreds of employees of BellSouth Corporation. As a result of these presentations, more than 400 BellSouth employees opened over 1,100 accounts with the Citigroup brokers. Most of these employees were unsophisticated investors with minimal experience in the financial markets who retired in their mid-50s, well before the BellSouth retirement age of 62. They generally were of modest means, with retirement savings of less than $350,000. These employees typically cashed out their pensions and 401(k) accounts, and invested these proceeds and other retirement assets with the Citigroup brokers.

“NASD remains strongly committed to protecting investors as they make critical decisions about how to provide for their retirement years,” said James S. Shorris, NASD Executive Vice President and Head of Enforcement. “The improperly supervised brokers in this case used misleading documents that made exaggerated and unwarranted projections of future earnings without fully explaining the risks involved. Many BellSouth employees gave up secure pensions, believing they could afford to retire early, but ended up losing substantial amounts from their retirement nest eggs. We are pleased that this settlement helps ensure that the injured investors will receive the restitution to which they are entitled.”

NASD also disciplined three brokers and two managers at the Charlotte branch office. Those sanctions include:

- A $125,000 fine and an 18-month suspension for Jeffrey Sweitzer, the broker who developed the sales campaign, led over 40 seminars, directed the activities of the other brokers and drafted or directed the drafting of the misleading sales materials.
- A $50,000 fine and a 9-month suspension for broker Matthew Muller, for his role at 25 seminars and numerous face-to-face meetings.
- A $30,000 fine and a 30-day suspension for Joseph Zentner, a junior broker who helped Sweitzer prepare some of the misleading sales materials.

- In addition, Sweitzer, Muller and Zentner must each complete 40 hours of continuing education relating to compliance with NASD rules and federal securities laws, including courses that cover communications with the public and the use of sales materials.
- A $60,000 fine and a 90-day suspension from acting in a supervisory capacity for the brokers' branch office manager, Randall Matz.
- A $30,000 fine and a 45-day suspension from acting in a supervisory capacity for branch operations manager Elizabeth Harris.

In addition, before Matz and Harris can return to work at a broker-dealer in a supervisory or principal capacity, they must each pass the appropriate NASD Qualification Examination.

NASD found that from 1994 to 2002 Sweitzer conducted more than 40 seminars, alone or with Muller, without obtaining firm approval for the seminars or seminar sales materials. Following the seminars, Sweitzer and Muller, alone or together, met with BellSouth employees. Using charts, graphs, handouts and other documents at the seminars and meetings, the brokers' sales presentations led the employees to expect that for 30 years they could earn approximately 12 percent annually on their investments and withdraw approximately 9 percent annually.

One document projected the amount a generic 53-year-old BellSouth employee would earn from an initial investment of $300,000. The projection sheet suggested that this typical employee would earn more than $1.8 million, could withdraw from $27,000 to $69,000 annually, and still have more than $770,000 in principal remaining 30 years later, at age 83. During their face-to-face meetings, many employees received a customized version of this document, which projected the amount of money the employee could expect to have after 30 years, based upon the employee's current age, assets and monthly expenses. Sweitzer told one couple: "I'm going to tell you by way of expectations that you should be able to expect 12%. That is not guaranteed, but I feel like good times, bad times, ugly times, beautiful times, we should be able to average 12... We expect to earn 12%. We pay out 9%.... [b]asically, 10 years down the road you are looking at doubling your money.... We may do 15, may do 18 or 20. But good times, bad times, I think that we would do 12%."

NASD found that the brokers' sales materials and presentation failed to adequately disclose that the recommended investments exposed the BellSouth employees to greater market risk than the employees would have faced had they opted to retain their fixed annuity pension payments from BellSouth. The brokers' materials also failed to adequately disclose that the customers would pay fees of two to three percent, requiring them to earn 14 to 15 percent annually to achieve the expected 12 percent return. It was not adequately explained that the expected 12 percent annual net returns exceeded the historical average return of the Standard & Poor's 500 index over 70 years, and that for many periods during that time the S&P 500 returned far less than 12 percent. The brokers also did not adequately disclose that the recommended investments could decline in value so much as to reduce the customers' principal. In addition, various pieces of the sales materials overstated the brokers' credentials and experience and omitted necessary disclaimers. NASD found that as a result of Sweitzer's and Muller's sales presentations many of the BellSouth employees came to believe that they could afford to retire early by relying upon monthly withdrawals from their retirement savings pursuant to the provisions of Internal Revenue Code Section 72(t). Under Section 72(t), a person under the age of 59 ½ can withdraw a fixed stream of regular and equal payments from their retirement accounts without having to pay the usual 10 percent tax penalty for early withdrawals. Relying on this IRS provision, many of Sweitzer's and Muller's customers cashed out their nearly risk-free BellSouth pensions, their 401(k) accounts and other retirement assets and invested the proceeds with the brokers. Fees and commissions from those BellSouth employee accounts comprised a majority of the compensation earned by Sweitzer and Muller.

Over 200 BellSouth employees saw the principal in their accounts decline by a total of approximately $12.2 million. NASD found that when the customer accounts began losing value, Sweitzer and Muller held a series of telephone conference calls to retain their clients' accounts. In a December 2000 call, Sweitzer told his clients that he believed that the Dow Jones Industrial Average (DJIA) could rise above 11,000 and that it might get "closer to 12,000" by the end of 2001. He also told clients that he believed the DJIA would double in six years, rising to 20,000 or 21,000 by 2006. Sweitzer had no reasonable basis for making these statements (in fact, the DJIA ended 2001 at 10,021).

Citigroup failed to follow up on various red flags arising from the brokers' conduct. During most of the relevant years, Sweitzer indicated to Citigroup in branch audit questionnaires that he was holding seminars, but the auditors did not require him to produce samples of the materials he was using at his seminars or to confirm that the seminars and related documents had been approved by a principal, as required by Citigroup's procedures. Furthermore, Citigroup's compliance officials had an opportunity to review one of the team's seminar handouts in 2001, but failed to detect, correct and follow up on some of the misstatements and omissions contained in the documents, after having sent the documents back to the branch for revision and resubmission. Matz and Harris failed to supervise the activities of the brokers even though they should have known the brokers were holding seminars and using misleading, unapproved sales materials.

NASD ordered Citigroup to pay $12.2 million in restitution to former BellSouth employees through the recently approved settlement of a North Carolina state court class action brought on behalf of the BellSouth customers of Citigroup, entitled Victoria T. McPhatter, et. al. v. Citigroup Global Markets, Inc., et al. The state court judge has certified the class and approved the settlement of the class action, Citigroup has deposited the money into an escrow account, and an administrator will process compensation claims from the brokers' customers subject to court approval.

Citigroup, Sweitzer, Muller, Zentner, Matz, and Harris settled the action announced today without admitting or denying the charges, but consented to the entry of NASD's findings.

Sweitzer's suspension in any capacity is in effect from June 18, 2007, through December 17, 2008. Muller's suspension in any capacity is in effect from June 18, 2007, through March 17, 2008. Zentner's suspension in any capacity was in effect from July 2, 2007, through July 31, 2007. Matz' suspension in any supervisory or principal capacity is in effect from July 2, 2007 through September 29, 2007. Harris' suspension in any supervisory or principal capacity is in effect from July 2, 2007 through August 15, 2007.

NASD Fines Wachovia Securities $2 Million for Fee-Based Account Violations

NASD Also Orders Firm to Identify and Pay Restitution to Approximately 1,300 Customers

NASD fined Wachovia Securities LLC of Richmond, VA, $2 million for failing to adequately supervise its fee-based brokerage business between 2001 through 2004.

In addition, NASD ordered Wachovia to identify and pay restitution to approximately 1,300 customers who were inappropriately allowed to continue maintaining fee-based accounts, or who were inappropriately charged account fees on Class A mutual fund share holdings for which they had already paid a sales load.

The firm also is required to retain an outside consultant to review its process of identifying and paying restitution to customers.

"Firms must have systems and procedures which are tailored to reasonably supervise their business activities," said NASD James Shorris, Executive Vice President and Head of Enforcement. "In the case of fee-based accounts, firms had an obligation to their customers to assess the appropriateness of such accounts both when the accounts were opened and periodically thereafter. Here, Wachovia failed to implement a system designed to ensure that an assessment of the appropriateness of the fee-based account occurred. This failure was compounded by the firm's failure to prevent certain fee-based customers from being charged both an account fee and a sales charge for the same mutual fund investments."

In fee-based brokerage accounts, customers are charged an annual fee that is either fixed or a percentage of the assets in the account, rather than a commission for each transaction, as in a traditional brokerage account. These accounts first became available in 1999 as a result of a proposed Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) rule that exempted stockbrokers from certain elements of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940. In March, a federal court struck down the final version of that SEC rule.

Wachovia began offering a fee-based brokerage account, now called "Pilot Plus," to its customers in 1999. In 2001, Wachovia had just over 18,000 Pilot Plus customers who paid more than $55 million in Pilot Plus fees. By the end of 2004, that number had grown to more than 41,000 customers who paid more than $110 million in Pilot Plus fees.

NASD found that during 2001 through 2004, Wachovia failed to establish and maintain an adequate supervisory system, including written procedures, reasonably designed to review and monitor its Pilot Plus accounts. While the firm informed its brokers that a Pilot Plus account was not appropriate for customers who made a limited number of trades, buy-and-hold customers, and customers with assets below $50,000, Wachovia failed to put in place a system and procedures reasonably designed to determine whether Pilot Plus accounts were appropriate for its customers.

NASD's investigation revealed that 594 Wachovia customers, who conducted no trades in their Pilot Plus accounts for at least two consecutive years, paid the firm approximately $1.9 million in fees. Also, 620 Pilot Plus customers held assets of less than $25,000 for at least one full year and paid at least the minimum annual fee of $1,000. This fee represented twice the firm's stated top rate of 2 percent allowed under the Pilot Plus agreement. During the time that these customers' eligible assets averaged below $25,000 for at least one full year, they paid a total of approximately $1 million in Pilot Plus fees. All of these customers will be entitled to restitution under the settlement.

In addition, Wachovia failed to reasonably enforce its written procedures designed to protect Pilot Plus customers from being assessed both an initial sales charge and an on-going asset-based fee on the purchases of Class A shares of mutual funds. Ordinarily, when a customer purchases Class A shares of a mutual fund, the customer pays a front end sales charge or "load" at the time of purchase. Under Wachovia's procedures, customers who purchased Class A shares outside of a Pilot Plus account and paid a front end sales charge on the purchase were not allowed to transfer those shares into a Pilot Plus account for at least 13 months so as to avoid duplicative charges for the fund shares. But Wachovia failed to enforce these procedures. Consequently, Wachovia charged more than 110 customers both a load and Pilot Plus fees on the purchase of Class A shares of mutual funds. These customers also will receive restitution pursuant to the settlement.

NASD also found that Wachovia failed to adequately supervise certain high revenue-producing brokers, who were members of the firm's "Red Carpet Club." The Red Carpet Club members were exempted from some of the firm's review and approval processes. Whereas most Pilot Plus accounts were opened only after review and approval by both a branch manager and a representative from the unit responsible for the oversight of all of the firm's fee-based programs, only branch manager approval was required for customers of Red Carpet Club members. This less vigorous review resulted in Red Carpet Club members opening Pilot Plus accounts for customers with total assets which were below the firm's stated $50,000 minimum account balance. This resulted in Red Carpet Club members' customers constituting approximately 99 percent of those accounts in Pilot Plus that held less than $25,000 in assets for at least one full year.

Additionally, two brokers, who were recruited from another firm and immediately became Red Carpet Club members, brought more than 340 of their customers to Wachovia and opened Pilot Plus accounts for them. In recommending Pilot Plus accounts to these customers, the two brokers incorrectly told them that Pilot Plus was an advisory account rather than a fee-based brokerage account. Wachovia failed to adequately supervise these brokers' communications with their customers. Moreover, once the firm discovered that these brokers had incorrectly described Pilot Plus as an advisory account, it failed to respond in a timely manner to correct the inaccurate representations made to these customers.

NASD also determined that Wachovia violated NASD rules governing communications with the public by providing its brokers with an optional letter they could send to customers which inaccurately stated at one point that Pilot Plus was “a fee-based, investment advisory service.” In fact, Pilot Plus was not an advisory service or advisory account, which would be subject to a different regulatory regime, but was in fact a fee-based brokerage account.

In settling this matter, the firm neither admitted nor denied the charges, but consented to the entry of NASD’s findings.

NASD Fines Wells Fargo Securities $250,000 for Failing to Disclose Analyst’s Employment with Covered Company in Research Report

NASD Also Suspends Former Director of Research, Files Complaint Against Analyst

NASD censured and fined Wells Fargo Securities, LLC of San Francisco $250,000—and imposed a $40,000 fine and 60-day supervisory suspension against its former Director of Research, Douglas van Dorsten—for failing to disclose in a research report that the lead analyst on the report had accepted a job at Cadence Design Systems, a San Jose, CA, company that was the subject of the report.

NASD also filed a complaint against Jennifer Jordan, the former Wells Fargo research analyst, for failing to disclose in a series of three research reports that she was pursuing employment and then had accepted a job with Cadence, which was the subject of all three reports. As part of her compensation package with Cadence, Jordan was to receive 15,000 shares of Cadence stock, along with the option to purchase an additional 75,000 shares, once she started working at Cadence.

“The actions announced today should remind brokerage firms and research analysts of the importance of full disclosure of conflicts of interest in research reports,” said James S. Shorris, NASD Executive Vice President and Head of Enforcement. “There is no doubt that, where a research analyst is pursuing employment or has accepted a job with a covered company, NASD rules require that information concerning such a clear conflict of interest must be disclosed in research reports.”

NASD’s disciplinary actions concern three research reports issued by Wells Fargo in February, March, and April of 2005. The subject of the research reports, Cadence, designs semi-conductors for use in the global electronics market. In each report, Jordan was listed as the lead analyst.

NASD alleged in its complaint that from January through April 2005, Jordan applied for, interviewed for, and then accepted a job at Cadence. On February 4, 2005, according to NASD’s complaint, after Jordan had applied for a job at Cadence, Wells Fargo issued a research report covering Cadence that increased the price target for the company from $16 per share to $18 per share. The report did not disclose that Jordan had applied for a job at Cadence.

The complaint further alleges that on March 2, 2005—after Jordan had met with Cadence senior management twice to interview for a job with the company—Wells Fargo issued a research report reiterating the $18 per share price target. That report did not disclose that Jordan had applied for a job at Cadence or that she was in employment discussions with the company.

After Wells Fargo issued the March 2, 2005 report, Jordan was offered a position at Cadence as Corporate Vice President of Investor Relations. As part of the offer, Cadence agreed to pay Jordan over $300,000 in salary and bonuses, provide her with 15,000 shares of Cadence stock and an option to purchase 75,000 additional shares, and provide her a $1 million interest-free loan. Shortly after she accepted the offer on April 9, 2005, Jordan told van Dorsten and others at Wells Fargo that she had accepted a job at Cadence.

On April 28, 2005, Wells Fargo published another research report concerning Cadence. That report raised revenue estimates for Cadence for the second quarter of fiscal year 2005 and increased both revenue and price-per-share estimates for the company for fiscal years 2005 and 2006. On the morning the report was issued, Jordan flew to Cadence's offices to attend a management meeting as a future employee of the company.

Although Wells Fargo and van Dorsten had learned nearly three weeks prior to the April 28 report that Jordan had accepted a position at Cadence as Vice President of Investor Relations, that information was not disclosed in the report. In his position as Director of Research, van Dorsten approved the April 28 report without requiring that the report disclose that Jordan had accepted a position with Cadence.

In its settlement with Wells Fargo and van Dorsten, NASD found that Jordan's acceptance of a job at Cadence constituted material information, a material conflict of interest, and a financial interest in the securities of Cadence that should have been disclosed in the April 28, 2005 report. NASD found that Wells Fargo and van Dorsten violated NASD rules by publishing the April 28 report without disclosing that information. Wells Fargo and van Dorsten neither admitted nor denied the findings, but consented to the entry of NASD's findings.

All three research reports are the subject of NASD's complaint against Jordan, which alleges that her acceptance of a job at Cadence constituted material information, a material conflict of interest, and a financial interest in Cadence securities that was required to be disclosed in the April 28, 2005 Cadence research report. The complaint further alleges that Jordan violated NASD rules by failing to disclose that she had applied for a job with Cadence and that she was in employment discussions with Cadence in the two earlier reports.

Because this complaint is unadjudicated, interested persons may wish to contact the respondent before drawing any conclusions regarding the allegations in the complaint.

Van Dorsten's suspension in any capacity was in effect from June 4, 2007, through August 2, 2007.

NASD Settles Cases Against MML Investors Services, NYLIFE Securities, Securities America and Northwestern Mutual Investment Services for Fines Totaling over $1.2 Million for Failures Relating to Mutual Fund Sales

MML and Northwestern Receive Credit for Remedial Efforts

NASD settled cases against four firms involving mutual fund sales violations.

NASD imposed a $473,000 fine against MML Investors Services, Inc., of Springfield, MA, and a $354,000 fine against NYLIFE Securities LLC, of New York, NY for improper Class B share sales. Securities America, Inc., of Omaha, NE was fined $322,000 for improper Class B and Class C share sales.

NASD also fined Northwestern Mutual Investment Services, LLC, of Milwaukee, WI, $100,000 for failure to have adequate supervisory systems and procedures to ensure that clients received Net Asset Value (NAV) pricing when appropriate under NAV transfer programs. MML's settlement included similar findings without a fine.

In resolving the Class B and Class C share cases, MML, NYLIFE and Securities America have agreed to remediation plans that cover over 10,200 transactions and at least 1,080 households.

In resolving the NAV cases, MML and Northwestern will provide additional remediation to customers who qualified for, but did not receive the benefit of, available NAV transfer programs. Total NAV remediation for MML, including remediation already paid to customers, is estimated at approximately $2.56 million. For Northwestern, total remediation is estimated at $2 million, in addition to the previous conversion of approximately $2.0 million in Class B shares to Class A shares. "The cases announced today are the result of NASD's continuing commitment to help ensure that sales of mutual funds—the investment product most commonly held by investors—are made appropriately and with the benefit of full consideration of all available share classes and pricing features," said James S. Shorris, NASD Executive Vice President and Head of Enforcement. "These firms failed to implement reasonable supervisory procedures to ensure that these considerations were addressed on a consistent basis."

Improper Sales of Class B and Class C Mutual Fund Shares

Class A shares generally charge a front-end sales charge and impose an asset-based sales charge that generally is lower than the asset-based sales charge imposed by Class B or Class C shares. Class B shares typically do not charge a front-end sales charge, but they do impose asset-based sales charges that are generally higher than those associated with Class A shares, and also impose a contingent deferred sales charge (CDSC) which the investor may pay at the time of sale. Class B share CDSCs generally decline over the time that an investor holds the shares and usually ultimately expire after a period of years, at which time Class B shares often convert to Class A shares. Class C shares usually do not impose a front-end sales charge upon purchase, but are often subject to a CDSC if sold within a short time of purchase, usually one year, and typically impose higher asset-based sales charges than Class A shares. Unlike Class B shares, Class C shares generally do not convert to Class A shares.

In recommending the purchase of mutual funds, a member firm must assess the suitability of the class of shares to be purchased as well as the suitability of the particular fund. Primary considerations include the investment amount, the expected term of the investment, the applicable sales loads, fees and expenses associated with each class and the effect of such factors on the ultimate return on investment to the investor. NASD found that, on certain occasions during January 2003 through July 2004, Securities America recommended and sold Class B and Class C share mutual funds and NYLIFE and MML recommended and sold Class B share mutual funds to their clients and did not adequately consider, on a consistent basis, the foregoing factors. These firms also had inadequate supervisory and compliance policies and procedures relating to these mutual fund sales.

Supervisory Failures Relating to Mutual Fund Sales Charge Waivers

MML and Northwestern were charged with failing to have adequate supervisory systems and procedures to identify opportunities for investors to purchase Class A mutual fund shares at NAV, without a front-end sales charge, and to ensure that all eligible investors received the benefit of available NAV transfer programs. During the period 2001 through 2004, many mutual fund families offered NAV transfer programs that eliminated front-end mutual fund sales charges for certain customers. Under an NAV transfer program, customers who redeemed fund shares for which they paid a sales charge were permitted to use those proceeds within prescribed time periods to purchase Class A shares of a new mutual fund at NAV—that is, without paying another sales charge.

NASD found that MML and Northwestern failed to have systems and procedures reasonably designed to identify opportunities for clients to purchase mutual funds at NAV and ensure that clients received the benefit of available NAV transfer programs when appropriate. As a result, certain investors who were eligible to purchase Class A shares under NAV transfer programs purchased Class A shares and incurred front-end sales charges that they should not have paid, and/or purchased other fund share classes that unnecessarily subjected them to higher fees and the potential of contingent deferred, or back-end, sales charges.

NASD imposed no fine against MML, however, for its failure to have an adequate supervisory system for its NAV transfer programs in light of MML's proactive remedial actions taken prior to NASD's detection of the violative conduct. MML discovered on its own that it failed to provide certain eligible customers with NAV pricing under available NAV transfer programs and proactively took prompt remedial action to investigate the situation and correct its system and procedures. As part of this process, MML conducted a self-review to identify clients who were eligible for, but did not receive, NAV pricing between 2001 and 2004 and paid more than $1.8 million in restitution to these clients.

NASD imposed a reduced fine of $100,000 against Northwestern in recognition of its prompt remedial steps after an NASD examination to assess client harm and provide remediation to eligible clients. Northwestern paid partial remediation of approximately $242,000 and converted approximately $2.0 million in Class B shares to Class A shares.

“We hope that NASD’s decision not to fine MML for supervisory system violations related to its NAV program, and to reduce the fine for Northwestern, will encourage other firms to increase their efforts to proactively identify compliance problems, promptly assess and correct underlying supervisory deficiencies and timely compensate any customers harmed,” Shorris said.

Each firm settled the matter without admitting or denying the allegations, but consented to the entry of NASD’s findings.
